MANNINGTON ANSWERS CONSUMER DEMAND FOR NEXT GENERATION LOOKS IN HANDCRAFTED HARDWOOD FLOORS

February 5, 2007 – Mannington is expanding its hand sculpted hardwood offering with the introduction of Inverness, a handcrafted hardwood floor that adds to the warmth and elegance of any home.

Inverness has the look and feel of an antique, hand-planed floor, with the benefits of modern manufacturing technology. The product features hand planning, hand rubbed glazing, and unique distressing elements. Available in three popular species, Cherry, Hickory, and Maple, Inverness has the charm and sophistication that today's consumer is looking for. Because of its hand applied glazing and distressing elements, this floor can suit virtually any interior from rustic to contemporary. It has been uniquely designed to complement glazed cabinetry and furniture.

Combined with Mannington's industry leading and exclusive ScratchResist™ coating, this unique design provides superior durability, and is backed by Mannington's 25-year warranty.

This collection will be available exclusively at independent retailers beginning April 2007.
